Elementary School Mathematics John A. Van de Walle 1994 Elementary School Mathematics: Teaching Developmentally, Second Edition, provides detailed, comprehensive coverage of the teaching of mathematics in grades K-8. Firmly grounded in the NCTM Standards, the text develops a constructivist/developmental approach to learning mathematics that focuses on the nature of mathematical concepts and the manner in which children construct mathematical ideas. It aims to help teachers reconceptualize mathematics as a problem-solving endeavor not as a mastery of rules and procedures. An accessible synthesis of viewpoints and current research, this highly praised text includes topics ranging from the development of basic fact mastery to the important development of "number sense"--All the while encouraging teachers to consider the construction of mathematics from the child's perspective. In-depth treatment of curriculum content teaching, combined with hundreds of teaching activities aimed at conceptual development, makes Elementary School Mathematics a practical teacher's resource as well as a college text. Elementary School Mathematics: Teaching Developmentally, Second Edition, features: greater emphasis on the NCTM Curriculum Standards and the Professional Teaching Standards as the leading forces in mathematics education; a new chapter on mathematics as a "science of pattern and order"; a completely rewritten chapter on alternative assessment; expanded and improved problem-solving examples; enhanced coverage of grades 7 and 8; even more black-line masters with directions for making other useful materials; and an Instructor's Manual with instructional suggestions, activities for group homework, practicum ideas, and essay questions.

Elementary School Teachers' Mathematics Instructional Decision Making in the Context of District Mandates on Instruction

Heather Anne Martin 2008 "In the current educational climate, teachers in low-performing schools are experiencing pressure from state and district policy-makers to raise student performance on state tests. Some district administrations have undertaken various measures including implementing numerous and specific mathematics content standards, adopting particular curricular packages and requiring teachers to use them as their primary instructional materials, and even creating pacing guides with uniform timelines for presenting lessons to students. These efforts have had the cumulative effect of urging teachers to stick closely to a standard curriculum in order to raise student test scores. Teachers must also interpret and attend to the needs of their students, and ideally teach their students to understand mathematical concepts and processes, as opposed to narrowly mastering procedural skills. It may not always be possible to both follow administrative mandates about instruction and meet student needs, and teachers may have to make a compromise between these two objectives. In this study, I examined how elementary school teachers in a particular accountability-pressured school decided to teach mathematics. Drawing on multiple interviews and ten classroom observations per teacher, I created portraits of the mathematics instructional choices of four second-grade teachers, including their use of instructional materials such as textbooks. I drew on an analytical framework adapted from Stein, Grover, and Henningsen (1996) to assess various features of the lesson, in order to note the interaction between the materials and the teachers' decisions about how to use them. I developed a "lesson signature" for each teacher, a visual representation of the typical organization of the teacher's lessons and how materials were used within them. My findings indicated that the teachers' individual goals for their teaching, beliefs about their students' needs, and interpretations of the district's curricular mandates interacted to steer their instructional choices to very different results. Two of the teachers dutifully followed the textbook, while two essentially disregarded it in favor of other materials. Teachers' own senses of their autonomy to make curricular decisions and their support for their students' autonomy in learning math emerged as important factors. I suggest implications for teacher professional development and curricular materials development"--
