Web Design & Development Nicolae Sfetcu A guide for developing web sites by means of conceptualization, planning, modeling, and execution of electronic media delivery via Internet. Web development is a broad term for any activities related to developing a web site for the World Wide Web or an intranet. This can include e-commerce business development, web design, web content development, client-side/server-side coding, and web server configuration. However, among web professionals, "web development" usually refers only to the non-design aspects of building web sites, e.g. writing markup and coding. Web development can range from developing the simplest static single page of plain text to the most complex web-based internet applications, electronic businesses, or social network services. Web design is a process of conceptualization, planning, modeling, and execution of electronic media delivery via Internet in the form of Markup language suitable for interpretation by Web browser and display as Graphical user interface (GUI).

Business Applications with Microsoft Word Susan H Vanhuss 2003-02-11 Business Applications with Microsoft Word takes document processing out of the classroom and into the workplace. A simulated company serves as the overall structure for this one of a kind text. Realistic workplace projects integrate business vocabulary, critical-thinking strategies, and web-research skills into the instruction of document processing making it an ideal resource for a third semester document-processing course. Related learning and success tips for working effectively are included to improve workplace efficiency and professional development. The project based applications reinforce the full range of word processing features and provide over 150 assignments. A website at www.businessapplications.com simulates an Intranet and acquaints the user with UBI and its services, and will provide valuable information needed in completing assignments.
