Reimagining Our Futures Together 2025-10-13 In Reimagining Our Futures Together: A New Social Contract for Education, the International Commission on the Futures of Education presents a compelling vision for transforming education to address global challenges. Drawing from a global consultation engaging approximately one million people, the report advocates for a new social contract grounded in human rights, social justice, and sustainability. It emphasizes the need for education systems that promote cooperation, solidarity, and ecological responsibility. By highlighting innovative practices and diverse perspectives, the report offers actionable recommendations to build peaceful, just, and sustainable futures through education.

Creolizing the Nation Kris F. Sealey 2020-09-15 Winner, 2022 Nicolás Cristóbal Guillén Batista Outstanding Book Award Creolizing the Nation identifies the nation-form as a powerful resource for political struggles against colonialism, racism, and other manifestations of Western hegemony in the Global South even as it acknowledges the homogenizing effects of the politics of nationalism. Drawing on Caribbean, decolonial, and Latina feminist resources, Kris F. Sealey argues that creolization provides a rich theoretical ground for rethinking the nation and deploying its political and cultural apparatus to imagine more just, humane communities. Analyzing the work of thinkers such as Édouard Glissant, Frantz Fanon, Gloria Anzaldúa, María Lugones, and Mariana Ortega, Sealey shows that a properly creolizing account of the nation provides an alternative imaginary out of which collective political life might be understood. Creolizing practices are always constitutive of anticolonial resistance, and their ongoing negotiations with power should be understood as everyday acts of sabotage. Sealey demonstrates that the conceptual frame of the nation is not fated to re-create colonial instantiations of nationalism but rather can support new possibilities for liberation and justice.

Reimagining our futures together International Commission on the Futures of Education 2021-11-06 The interwoven futures of humanity and our planet are under threat. Urgent action, taken together, is needed to change course and reimagine our futures. Education, long acknowledged as a powerful force for positive change, has new, urgent and important work to do. This report, two years in the making, invites governments, institutions, organizations, and citizens around the world to forge a new social contract for education that will help us build peaceful, just, and sustainable futures.

A Fair Day's Work Sean Scalmer 2025-08-13 The length of the working day and the challenges of work-life balance are pressing issues for many Australians, as well as lively matters of public controversy. While the winning of the eight-hour day is celebrated as a past industrial achievement, contemporary discussions of working hours often overlook its rich history. Tracing 150 years of campaigns for rights and for the fair distribution of productivity gains, historian Sean Scalmer shows how these movements successfully reduced the length of the standard working week from 60 to 38 hours per week, and how economic, social and political shifts since the early 1980s have stalled this long-term progress. Today, industrial laws provide inadequate protection for excessive hours, and Australian women increasingly shoulder long hours of paid work with the bulk of unpaid domestic labour. This has produced a social crisis for all Australians, but is yet to inspire adequate political action. As debate over our working lives intensifies amid ongoing political, economic and technological challenges, Scalmer's labour of love on the history of work and play affords us a way to understand the past so we can win back our time—collectively.

The Human Face of Justice David A. Backer 2004 Since 1974, dozens of countries have undergone transitions from repressive regimes, war and civil conflict. A basic dilemma in this context is whether to pursue accountability for perpetrators of human rights violations. Among the modes of transitional justice, truth commissions have emerged as a popular compromise approach. Existing research does not establish if such investigations, typically implemented in lieu of prosecutions, are acceptable to victims of violations. This dissertation assesses the impact of participation in South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) on victims' attitudes. The analysis relies on data collected in Johannesburg and Cape Town, communities with contrasting histories of violence that were addressed by separate regional offices. Both studies involved retrospective surveys of three cohorts of victims: those who submitted statements to the TRC, those who also testified at public hearings, and those who did neither (pooled N = 404). Eight focus groups preceded the Johannesburg survey; the Cape Town survey was followed by 16 in-depth interviews. Respondents were recruited via random, cluster and convenience sampling. As hypothesized, participation engenders more favorable responses; however, the effects are inconsistent. Whereas submitting a statement improves perceptions of justice, testifying has little marginal impact. These views are modulated by assessments of the process, which are hardly monolithic. Instead, individual victims are conflicted and exhibit varying responses to distinct aspects of the process. Optimism is high initially, and many participants are satisfied with their involvement, citing numerous benefits. Nevertheless, few victims believe they have received justice; misgivings about substantive outcomes overshadow positive procedural evaluations. Participation can even heighten perceptions of injustice, by increasing expectations. Differences in institutional capacity and outreach also prompt more negative responses among Johannesburg victims relative to Cape Town victims. While dissatisfaction with the TRC is common, such concerns do not induce political disengagement or a desire for retribution. Rather, victims favor mobilization and exercising voice within the democratic dispensation. These results resonate with available comparative evidence and are pertinent to countries facing similar policy choices. The finding that participatory mechanisms can foster political support, contingent on equitable consideration and conscientious follow-up, has broad implications for designing institutions in new democracies.

The New Waterfront Ann Breen 1996 Making telling use of hundreds of photographs, Ann Breen and Dick Rigby analyze key waterfront developments from around the world in seven major themes: commercial (public enjoyment of the waterfront via cafes and restaurants, hotels, shopping and socializing); cultural and educational (in which museums and concert halls, ecological parks and modern aquariums are made attractive and accessible); historic (with a focus on the structures of past generations, modernized to take into account today's needs and tastes); recreational (parks and walkways, marinas and play areas); residential (urban projects rather than resorts); and working waterfronts (featuring today's continued industrial uses of center-city waterfronts, an often-forgotten aspect of the new waterfront). The authors also select some of the most dramatic waterfront makeovers for inclusion in a separate chapter on "Major Transformations". These include vast projects, but also smaller efforts with significant community impact. Dozens of schemes are discussed in detail, and nearly a hundred are put into context in the illustrated gazetteer at the end of the book, revealing waterfront regeneration as a truly universal phenomenon of our time. Authoritatively written, meticulously researched and spectacularly illustrated, The New Waterfront is an indispensable resource for architects, urban planners, developers, landscape designers and students - a book that will also have a much wider appeal for anyone lured by the attraction of the water's edge.

Food and Multiculture Alex Rhys-Taylor 2020-05-12 In this book, Alex Rhys-Taylor offers a ground-breaking sensory ethnography of East London. Drawing on the multicultural context of London, one of the most cosmopolitan cities in the world, he explores concepts such as gentrification, class antagonism, new ethnicities and globalization. Rhys-Taylor shows how London is characterized by its rich history of socioeconomic change and multiculturalism, exploring how its smells and food are integral to understanding both its history and the reality of London's urban present. From the fiery chillies sold by street grocers which are linked to years of cultural exchange, through 'cuisines of origin' like jellied eels to hybridized dishes such as the chicken katsu wrap, sensory experiences are key to understanding the complex cultural genealogies of the city and its social life. Each of the eight chapters combines micro histories of ingredients such as fried chicken, bush-meat and curry sauce, featuring narratives from individuals that provide a unique, engaging account of the evolution of taste and culture through time and space. With its innovative methodology, this is a highly original contribution to the fields of sensory studies, food studies, urban studies and cultural studies.

Promoting and Managing International Investment J Anthony VanDuzer 2020-02-17 This book provides an overview of international investment policy and policy-making, drawing upon perspectives from law, economics, international business, and political science. International investment is a complex phenomenon with significant effects worldwide. Developing effective policies and strategies to attract investment in sufficient quantities and marshal it to contribute to sustainable development is a critical challenge for governments at all levels. This book's interdisciplinary approach provides fresh insights into the mix of policy options available to governments seeking investment to support their country's (or region's) development. As well as identifying ways to effectively design, implement, and assess policies to attract foreign investment, it explores how to manage foreign investment's effects. Various dimensions of international investment policy are discussed, including benefits and costs (economic, environmental, social, and political) of foreign investment, the significance of global value chains, state-owned enterprises and sovereign wealth funds, and the role of tax policy, investment promotion, and policy advocacy, location branding, investment treaties, and national security considerations. Through its contributions to a new interdisciplinary understanding of international investment policy-making, this book will benefit students and scholars working in areas such as international business, international economic law, international economics, development economics, international development, and international political economy as well as being a valuable resource for policy-makers.

South Africa's Democracy at the Crossroads Daniel Silander 2022-04-18 South Africa's democracy faces increasing challenges from within, whether from protest, bad governance or general public dissatisfaction. South Africa's Democracy at the Crossroads explores the question; what are the challenges to future democratization in South Africa?

Postcards, Translators and Esperanto Pioneers Guilherme Fians 2025-11-13 Esperanto has a rich and multifaceted history. Delving into a fascinating microhistory of a Scottish family and the ways in which they used Esperanto to build transnational networks across Europe, this book shows how ordinary Esperanto speakers used the language in its early decades. It explores how languages and media help shape the ways in which we build our worlds through words, providing an alternative, "marginal" approach to early twentieth-century glo.
